How can people contribute to education for young girls at an individual level?

Mentoring young girls- Change always begins at the grass level, hence, offering your time and expertise to young girls near your own home can help them build skills, confidence and become literate.

Volunteering – Sign up for NGOs much like Kudrat, where you can volunteer and spend a minimal amount of your time to help little girls grow into smart women. This volunteering can be for a number of different arenas, you can either help at back end or at the field level.

Donations – If you are able to, you should always donate some amount of money towards good causes such as education for girls, provision of better amenities, sanitation etc. Your little contribution could make significant changes and upliftment in the quality of young and innocent lives eager to tackle the world.

Sponsorship schemes- Where in one can sponsor education, medical supplies, toiletries, food and other such basic yet necessary amenities for girl children and help them wholistically for a set amount of time.

Spreading awareness- Individuals should always take to posting on social media, we tend to think that putting up a simple story or post will not be a changemaker in the society, however, most of the times that is how other people get aware and grasp new knowledge about things unknown to them. Hence, one should take to spreading awareness about the sheer goodness of giving and helping.
